EXPLANATORY NOTES

The purpose of this bill is to allow an employee to be absent from work to provide care or support to a close relation, whether a relative or not (informal caregiving).

The Act respecting labour standards is amended to allow an employee to be absent from work, without pay, 10 days a year, to provide such care or support as is currently permitted to fulfil his or her parental obligations or due to the state of a family member’s health.

The 10 days an employee may be absent for family or parental matters or to provide care or support to a close relation may be divided into hours or otherwise, with the employer’s consent.

Furthermore, the number of weeks an employee may be absent from work over a 12-month period is increased from 12 to 17 if the employee must stay with his or her child, spouse, spouse’s child, father, mother, father’s or mother’s spouse, brother, sister or grandparent due to an illness or a serious injury. In the same circumstances, the employee may be absent for the same length of time when required to stay with a close relation, whether a relative or not.

Lastly, an employee may be absent from work no more than 28 weeks over a 12-month period if the illness or injury involves a significant risk of death. However, if the employee’s minor child needs care or support due to an illness or injury involving a significant risk of death, attested by a medical certificate, the employee remains entitled to an extension of the absence. The absence ends at the latest 104 weeks after beginning.
