EXPLANATORY NOTES

This bill proposes amendments to the Labour Code as regards the essential services that must be maintained in the event of a strike in public services and in the public and parapublic sectors.

With respect to public services, the Administrative Labour Tribunal is granted the power, currently conferred on the Government, to order that essential services be maintained if a strike may endanger public health or safety. The Tribunal is empowered to make such an order, for the same reason, with respect to a service, undertaking or enterprise that is not a public service. The minimum period a certified association must wait before it may declare a strike in a public service after an agreement has been forwarded to the Tribunal or a list of essential services has been forwarded to the Tribunal and the employer is increased to seven clear working days. Moreover, the Tribunal is given the power, currently conferred on the Government, to suspend the exercise of the right to strike in cases where the essential services in a public service are insufficient and this endangers public health or safety.

With respect to the public and parapublic sectors, the bill replaces the obligation to maintain a percentage of employees per work shift in an institution in the event of a strike by the obligation to maintain essential services whose interruption may endanger public health or safety. It mainly provides that those services must be negotiated between the parties and that if no agreement is reached, a certified association must send the Tribunal a list providing for the essential services that must be maintained in the event of a strike. Such an agreement or list must comply with certain criteria and be approved by the Tribunal, with or without amendment.

Moreover, the Tribunal's remedial powers are modified so that the Tribunal may, in public services and in the public and parapublic sectors, conduct an inquiry or make an order when the essential services provided for in an agreement or list are not sufficient.

Finally, the bill updates the definition of "public service" and contains consequential and transitional provisions.

LEGISLATION AMENDED BY THIS BILL:

- Labour Code (chapter C-27).

For the same reason, the Tribunal, on its own initiative or at an interested person’s request, may order the employer of a service, undertaking or enterprise not referred to in section 111.0.16 and a certified association in that service, undertaking or enterprise to maintain essential services in the event of a strike. In such a case, the service, undertaking or enterprise is considered a public service for the purposes of this Code.

From the date the Tribunal’s decision is notified to the parties, the exercise of the right to strike is suspended until the certified association concerned meets the requirements of sections 111.0.18 and 111.0.23.
