Part 5

WRITTEN QUESTIONS

Questions already placed on the Order Paper are published each Wednesday

- (153) Mr. Fontecilla (Laurier-Dorion) – 10 September 2024
To the Minister Responsible for Housing

Under the AccèsLogis program, two subsidies are available to improve a project's accessibility and adaptability. The housing adaptation subsidy (SUAL) makes it possible to integrate adaptation measures for housing in order to better meet the changing needs of those who live there. The home adaptation subsidy (SAD) allows people who need adaptations to have them made during the construction.

These two subsidies are through the AccèsLogis program and are not part of the Québec affordable housing program (PHAQ).

Currently, people with disabilities can apply to the home adaptation program (PAD). However, they must already be living in the home before applying for the PAD, which means they must wait a long time for their new home to be adapted to their needs. Furthermore, the PAD is intended for specific people and therefore does not apply to temporary housing projects, such as those for victims of domestic violence or people experiencing homelessness.

My question to the Minister Responsible for Housing is the following:

Could the SUAL and SAD subsidies, or other similar measures, be included in the PHAQ program?

- (154) Mr. Fontecilla (Laurier-Dorion) – 10 September 2024
To the Minister Responsible for Housing

For the AccèsLogis program, project accessibility and adaptability standards are clearly defined in the project development and implementation guide, last updated in 2021.

For example, hallways must be at least 1,500 mm wide, room dimensions are specified and at least 10% of units must be accessible and adaptable. If the building has an elevator, all units must be accessible and adaptable.

There does not appear to be a similar guide or similar standards for the Québec affordable housing program (PHAQ) or for the agreements not covered by programs, such as the Mission Unitâinés project. Projects funded by Québec through the PHAQ may therefore have hallways that are 920 mm wide (the minimum under the Construction Code). These hallways are not accessible for most people who use mobility aids.

Funding such projects therefore means using public funds to increase systemic exclusion and discrimination against people with disabilities.

My question to the Minister Responsible for Housing is the following:

What measures do you intend to implement to ensure that Québec-funded housing can be visited and lived in by anyone, regardless of their abilities?
