- (55) Mr. Leduc (Hochelaga-Maisonneuve) – 24 October 2025
To the Minister of Families

A Radio-Canada report published in April 2023 revealed the inaccessibility of daycare premises for many parents with physical disabilities (RDI, Garderies inaccessibles, 22 April 2023). Organizations defending the rights of persons with disabilities then requested that information on the accessibility of educational childcare premises be made available on the new childcare registration portal. The then Minister of Families undertook to include this information in the new portal.

For parents with disabilities, finding an accessible educational childcare centre is an uphill battle. The current La Place 0-5 portal barely contains any information on the accessibility of daycare centres and CPEs, and employees generally have no knowledge of accessibility issues. Thus, parents must resign to visiting educational childcare centres one by one, in the hope of eventually finding accessible premises. Making the physical accessibility of childcare centres publicly available would be an excellent first step towards universal accessibility within the educational childcare network, promoting independence and inclusion for all parents. Furthermore, the department has subsidized the organization AlterGo for the development of tools to support educational childcare centres in assessing their accessibility, including a self-appraisal chart (AlterGo, L'accessibilité universelle en services de garde; Grille d'auto-évaluation).

My questions to the Minister are the following:

- Has her department informed all educational childcare centres of the existence of AlterGo's self-appraisal tool and encouraged them to complete the chart and provide detailed information on the portal?
- When deploying the Childcare Services Registration Portal, will the Minister uphold her predecessor's public commitment by requiring all educational childcare centres to post the level of physical accessibility of their premises on the portal?
