COMMITTEE ON TRANSPORTATION AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Part 5

WRITTEN QUESTIONS

Questions already placed on the Order Paper
are published each Wednesday

(96) Ms. Ghazal (Mercier) – 4 February 2026
To the Minister of Finance

Each year, hundreds of Québec families are informed that one of their children has a serious illness such as cancer, a heart defect, or a rare disease.

When parents have to stop working to care for their child during treatment, they are often left without long-term disability insurance coverage, even if they are enrolled in a group insurance plan.

A brief recently submitted to the Committee on Public Finance proposes to remedy this gap by amending the Act respecting insurance so that parents of a child between 0 and 12 years of age with a serious illness are automatically covered by their long-term disability insurance plan for the duration of the treatment.

According to the estimates provided in the brief, the annual cost of such a measure would be less than $1 per insured person, with no need for public funding.

My questions to the Minister are the following:

- Can the Minister of Finance tell us whether his department has assessed the human and economic impacts, on parents, of the current lack of long-term disability insurance coverage?
- Has the Minister held discussions with the Autorité des marchés financiers on the integration of such a measure in the Act respecting insurance, and does he intend to consider or support the proposal set forth in the brief, which would be implemented at no cost for the State?
- Has the Minister assessed the possibility of creating a public long-term insurance plan for parents in need?

(97) Mr. Grandmont (Taschereau) – 10 February 2026
To the Minister of Employment

Women’s employability groups are organizations that, due to the structural gender inequalities women continue to face in the labour market, specialize in the development of the female workforce. Such inequalities persist despite the Government’s gender equality commitments and may be linked to other forms of discrimination depending on the employment path. The Government’s commitments are reaffirmed, in particular, in its gender equality strategy for 2022–2027, entitled Stratégie gouvernementale pour l’égalité entre les femmes et les hommes 2022-2027, which recognizes that the economic self-sufficiency of women continues to be impeded by the gender division of labour and by persistent job market inequalities.

These organizations play a key role in supporting women’s economic self-sufficiency and correcting well-documented structural imbalances. However, they are currently threatened by government decisions incompatible with their mission. The network has gone from some forty organizations to only 15 active women’s employability groups in Québec. In 2025, the group Le Jalon was obliged to close its doors, and several other organizations are currently experiencing significantly increased vulnerability, marked by restructuring and the calling into question of recognized and effective services.

At the same time, despite repeated representations by the Conseil d’intervention pour l’accès des femmes au travail, the Government still refuses to provide recognition for women’s employability groups in the form of funding for their mission. Instead, it keeps them trapped in an unstable service agreement model, managed by Services Québec, based on policies determined directly by the Ministère de l’Emploi et de la Solidarité sociale.

Lastly, in its 2025 budget, the federal government announced the sum of $382.5 million over five years for its Women’s Program, one of the objectives of which is to ensure women’s full participation in Canada’s economic life.

My question to the Minister is the following:

1. Does the Ministère de l’Emploi et de la Solidarité sociale intend to reverse the trend of cutbacks compromising access to specialized employability services for women?

2. Does the Minister intend to engage the $382.5 million the federal government has earmarked for the support of the economic security and prosperity of women to ensure the preservation of women's employability groups?

(98) Ms. Blanchette Vézina (Rimouski) – 10 February 2026
To the Minister of Transport and Sustainable Mobility

For several years, the Association nationale des camionneurs artisans inc. (ANCAI) has been calling for bulk brokerage to be reserved exclusively for non-profit organizations (NPOs) accredited by the Commission des transports du Québec (CTQ). This measure seeks to ensure rigorous oversight of the sector, guarantee the integrity of public markets and protect independent truckers from unfair market practices.

Currently, the requirement for independent truckers to hold a permit costing between $20,000 and 25,000 is perceived as a flagrant injustice, especially since access to public contracts appears to be diminishing.

Furthermore, the ANCAI highlights a worrying situation: the disappearance of clauses promoting the hiring of regional workers in contracts awarded by the Société québécoise des infrastructures (SQI). This exclusion directly contradicts the government's commitments to regional economic development.

Given the lack of follow-up from the department, my questions are the following:

1. Brokerage reform: Does the department intend to follow up on the ANCAI's request to limit brokerage to NPOs accredited by the CTQ in order to stabilize the market?
2. Protection of independent truckers: What measures does the Minister intend to implement to reduce the financial burden associated with the cost of bulk-transport permits for independent truckers?
3. Regional development: Why were the regional priority clauses removed from the SQI contracts, and does the Minister intend to intervene to reinstate them immediately?

(99) Ms. Cadet (Bourassa-Sauvé) – 11 February 2026
To the Minister of Labour

According to a recent Le Devoir article, the accelerated adoption of artificial intelligence (AI) in the workplace has considerably transformed work organization and career paths, in particular for young workers. Seven out of ten Canadian SMEs are using AI or generative AI, and nearly 75% of them intend to increase investments in this regard, according to a Microsoft report published in 2025.

Paradoxically, though young people are those most comfortable and open with the use of these technologies, the emergence of AI would contribute to the scarcity of internships and entry-level positions, particularly in professional services and in the financial, technological and retail sectors. In December 2025, the unemployment rate of people between the ages of 15 and 24 was at 13.3%, more than twice that of people aged 25 to 54, and a study by Mouvement Desjardins suggests that AI may be partly responsible for the degradation of young people's employment opportunities.

Experts, including researchers at the Institut national de la recherche scientifique, also underline that AI is changing working conditions, notably through the implementation of performance objectives established by algorithms and the increasing use of digital monitoring tools, sometimes without workers even being informed of the fact. Currently, the Québec legal framework does not clearly require that workers be informed of the use of monitoring technologies in the workplace.

Can the Minister of Labour detail his department's assessment of the impacts of artificial intelligence on young people's access to employment and the quality of jobs and working conditions, and does he intend to modernize the legal framework to regulate the use of AI and monitoring tools in the workplace, in particular to protect young workers and to ensure practices compliant with fundamental rights?

(100) Ms. Cadet (Bourassa-Sauvé) – 11 February 2026
To the Minister of Employment

In the context of the ongoing labour shortage, several key sectors of the Québec economy—in particular, health, construction, food services, the hotel industry, retail and maintenance—are structurally dependent on foreign workers to maintain operations. However, recent changes in immigrant selection and prioritization programs have created considerable uncertainty regarding the ability of thousands of workers already integrated into the Québec labour market to retain their jobs.

The risk of losing 6 300 temporary foreign workers in the health care system, including beneficiary attendants, nurses and social workers, before the Government intervenes to prioritize their cases recently has recently been brought to light. However, many employers in a variety of sectors report that essential workers who are already trained and employed continue to be threatened with having to leave Québec due to the lack of clear mechanisms to safeguard their continued participation in the labour market.

Foreign workers have only partially compensated for the labour shortage since the post-pandemic economic recovery, while businesses in all regions of Québec continue to face major recruiting difficulties. Employers and employers' associations maintain that the uncertainty surrounding the ability of these workers to retain their jobs is directly undermining the economy, compromising the continuity of services and jeopardizing the survival of numerous businesses.

Can the Minister of Employment explain how her department appraises the impact of current policies on the true availability of labour, what concrete measures she intends to put in place to ensure that essential workers already integrated into the Québec labour market are able to retain their jobs, and how she intends to keep political decisions from worsening the labour shortage in the key sectors of the Québec economy?

(101) Mr. Morin (Acadie) – 24 February 2026

To the Minister Responsible for Relations with the First Nations and the Inuit

Access to mammography services is difficult for Nunavik women. Only 352 mammographies have been carried out since October 2022, when the portable mammography unit used in Nunavik was retired from service, having been deemed obsolete.

Yet, there are over 1,300 women in the region between the ages of 50 and 74 who are eligible for the Québec Breast Cancer Screening Program.

Does the Minister, in partnership with the Nunavik Regional Board of Health and Social Services, have a plan and a timeline for improving access to mammographies in Nunavik?

(102) Mr. Morin (Acadie) – 24 February 2026

To the Minister Responsible for Relations with the First Nations and the Inuit

2025 was a record year for tuberculosis cases in Nunavik. The region has one of the highest rates of tuberculosis in the world, according to the Nunavik Regional Board of Health and Social Services,

Given this grim record, the Board is hoping the Québec government will grant it additional funding to execute an already-presented action plan.

Does the Minister intend to grant additional funding, and what is the expected time frame for the implementation of the action plan?
