Project Overview Provide enhanced community policing services to the Akwesasne community by hiring an additional three (3) Community Safety Officers, and funding the Community Safety Officer currently employed (1). The Community Safety Officers will work with community stakeholders to reduce crime by responding to priority crime issues, assessing early risk factors among vulnerable families, elders, children, and at-risk youth; preventing recidivism; and fostering preventative initiatives. The overall goals are crime reduction, increases in restorative justice referrals in support of the Indigenous Justice Program, and an increase in public satisfaction with policing services.
Work Plan Akwesasne First Nation will: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Hire three (3) Community Safety Officers 2. Fund the currently employed Community Safety Officer (1) Community Safety Officers will: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Participate in on-the-job training/ride-along 2. Develop and distribute brochure/information to community members regarding community bylaws/compliance, laws, security and safety etc. 3. Deliver educational sessions/workshops, as well as, attend community sessions/workshops, gatherings, events etc. 4. Develop a Standard Operating Procedures for permits, issuing receipts etc. 5. Develop and maintain a data base to track permits, occurrences etc. 6. Canvas community members regarding services offered and future needs/requirements 7. Develop a plan for sustainability
Expected Outcomes Immediate <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Enhance the capacity by providing additional personnel focused on safety and prevention. While not fully sworn police officers, they complement First Nations and Inuit police services by handling non-criminal matters, allowing police to focus on core duties. - Ensure culturally relevant approaches to safety by recruiting from the community. CSOs integrate traditional practices and community norms into their work, strengthening trust and cultural alignment. Intermediate <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - CSOs support police services by reducing police officers workload pressures and improving response times for lower-risk issues. - Police services gain operational flexibility by adding community-based safety members. CSOs perform tasks like wellness checks, traffic control, and community engagement, enhancing institutional capacity. - CSOs, as familiar and approachable community members, improve relationships between law enforcement and residents, acting as a bridge between police and the community. - CSOs assist with data collection on community safety issues, contributing to better reporting and analysis, which supports trend identification and progress measurement in crime reduction. Ultimate <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - By addressing non-criminal safety concerns and supporting proactive initiatives (ex. youth engagement, mental health referrals), CSOs will enable holistic approaches to community safety. This will lead to reduced crime rates, quicker interventions, and stronger community resilience.

ANNEX E
Guidelines
Community Safety Workers (CSWs) / By-law & Compliance Enforcement Officers of Akwesasne (CEOs) / Community Safety Officers (CSOs)

Some restrictions and caveats apply in Quebec in the context of this pilot project in respect of the activities and duties of community safety workers (CSWs), by-law & compliance enforcement officers of Akwesasne (CEOs) and community safety officers (CSOs). These activities are carried out within the boundaries of Akwesasne, in a manner that is complementary to and subordinate to the Akwesasne Mohawk Police Service (AMPS).

The statistics collected as part of this pilot project will be used to define the mandate of CSWs able to work in Quebec.

1. Restrictions and caveats

CSWs' activities and duties are subject to regulatory conditions or restrictions, or those set out in the Agreement. CSWs' job description must comply with the laws of Quebec.

CSWs are not peace officers and therefore do not have the powers and immunities enjoyed by peace officers (including police officers, special constables and other protection officers).

The Agreement does not authorize CSWs to enforce provincial legislation and to carry out the functions and duties provided for in provincial enactments.

Police officers and highway controllers have exclusive jurisdiction to enforce the rules of the Highway Safety Code (HSC) on roads.

To avoid CSWs having to perform duties outside their jurisdiction that could put the safety of CSWs and the public at risk, the area covered by CSWs must have 24/7 police coverage.

CSWs may not give the impression that they are peace officers or carry out duties that should only be carried out by police officers. They must work in a manner that ensures their safety at all times.

Uniformed CSWs and the vehicles and equipment used by them must be distinct so that they cannot be confused with police officers.

Any vehicles used by CSWs must comply with HSC requirements regarding lights and rotating lights. CSWs are prohibited from participating in criminal investigations and detaining persons in relation to suspected criminal activity (except in the exceptional circumstances listed below).

CSWs are prohibited from using force, except in self-defence. They are prohibited from carrying and using firearms in the performance of their duties. They are also prohibited from using intermediate weapons (pepper spray and tasers). They may use expandable batons and handcuffs only if they have obtained certification of training recognized by the Quebec Department of Public Security.

The establishment of security perimeters to protect crime scenes or protect individuals from imminent risks and, if necessary, the evacuation of any individuals present fall within the jurisdiction of the police, as these activities may require exercising powers under the Criminal Code and using force.

Maintaining or restoring law and order and carrying out crowd control in the event of overcrowding or riots are police activities that require the powers and protections provided for under the Criminal Code.

CSWs are also prohibited from:

- a) Detaining individuals to identify them;
- b) Making arrests that should only be made by peace officers, in accordance with the Criminal Code, the Code of Penal Procedure or other specific statutes;
- c) Searching individuals, private locations or vehicles, and seizing property;
- d) Entering into a private residence to establish an offence;
- e) Executing arrest or search warrants;
- f) Serving summons to appear;
- g) Pursuing and stopping vehicles on the road, boats on bodies of water and motor vehicles on trails;
- h) Controlling traffic, setting up roadblocks and administering blood alcohol tests;
- i) Transporting detainees;
- j) Dispersing crowds and evacuating areas;
- k) Enforcing acts and regulations except for Band Council by-laws or by-laws of the legal entity responsible;
- l) Carrying out any intervention requiring special skills and entailing risks that should solely be performed by emergency services, such as crowd control, rescue operations or operations involving hazardous materials (chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear or explosive);
- m) Responding to individuals who are armed and have barricaded themselves, regardless of whether there are hostages involved;
- n) Responding to individuals with mental health issues or who are suicidal and who represent a risk or imminent threat to safety;
- o) Installing microphones, cameras or GPS transmitters to monitor individuals;
- p) Informing the media or the public about police operations or any situation the police is responsible for; and
- q) Disclosing confidential information to which they are exposed in the course of performing their duties.

CSWs must sign a confidentiality agreement to preserve information that could affect the administration of justice and public safety.

CSWs must comply with the standards of conduct established by the employer (AMPS).

2. Civilian response in situations involving public safety

Until a police officer is able to respond, CSWs may act as first responders in non-criminal, low-risk priority situations posing a public safety issue when there is no imminent danger for anyone involved (e.g., in the event of a common nuisance complaint, unlawful assembly or person needing help).

CSWs should only respond to a person in crisis who may become violent or who could be a danger to themselves or the people around them (if the person is armed for example) in the presence of a police officer. Calls about incidents involving firearms or explosions, for example, should only be attended by police officers, even if this means a delayed response.

In exceptional situations where no police officers are available and a CSW has reasonable grounds to believe that a person is committing or has committed a crime, the CSW may—without jeopardizing their own safety or that of others—arrest and detain the person until a police officer arrives to deal with the person.¹ The CSW must deliver the arrested person to a police officer as soon as possible.

¹When performing a citizen's arrest, civilians must consider the guidelines provided by the Department of Justice Canada, <https://www.justice.gc.ca/eng/rp-pr/other-autre/wyntk.html>, and section 494 of the Criminal Code.
