The culinary traditions of our families

Grandmothers, mothers, aunts: when the members of our kitchen brigade were very young, these women sparked their vocations and inspired them to take the career paths they follow today. Delicious aromas, kind acts and shared meals passed down passion and respect for our family traditions. Let us honour those who led us to express our creativity and advance our know-how in the kitchen.

First things first

Devilled eggs with smoked mayonnaise, crisp bacon, bread chips

Our entire kitchen brigade agrees that eggs are at the heart of their daily lives and the recipes passed down from generation to generation. Devilled eggs? A memory of holidays and special occasions celebrated with family.

Pièce de Résistance

Grandma Denise's shepherd's pie

The favorite dish of one of our cooks! Made how his mother, Denise, has been preparing it since he was a child: beef lovingly braised, pulled, then covered with mashed sweet potatoes and regular potatoes, served with a corn and yellow beet ketchup.

The Finale

Rhubarb cake

A creation by two of our two pastry chefs, a fusion of their favorite desserts, inspired by their mothers: pouding chomeur and rhubarb pudding united in a generous cake served with a maple whipped cream and rhubarb jelly.

Fair trade coffee / Infusion

The Ginette

In honor of the most committed woman at Le Parlementaire, the one who has spent five decades here, our colleague Ginette, something sweet, bubbly and refreshing.

Sparkling wine, elderberry liqueur, soda water, fresh mint
